Jeune Femme en Ville

Anisomorphisms become apparent to voyeurs during the anagnorisis of our young heroine . . . not due to the psilosis or putrescent prolix paralogisms or any other excesses of our muliebric protagonist, but arise as expected provender or valid quidproquo of any lassie's post conundrum redintegration. No. . . 'tis a pellucid anthesis, relucent with the felicific breath of discovery. Though she be gey allannah, so reigns anagogy: a fantoccini amaranth for us all.

Welcome to Emergency #9

Emergency is Peterborough New Dance's annual festival of new dance and performance by regional artists. Now in its ninth year, it continues to be one of PND's most popular events with both audiences and performers, and this year features the most performances in the festival's history. Thirteen new works have been broken down into three programs. Programs A and B are dedicated to artists who have presented their own work before, either in Peterborough or elsewhere. Program C is made up of artists who are presenting, for the first time, an original work of dance or performance.

Last year, PND began to collaborate with Artspace, which has taken on the creation of a performance art program for Emergency. (Artspace, you may recall, sponsored the first festival, known as Emergence-y in year one.) The association continues this year with a program of audio art in performance entitled Outerspace-Sounds Impossible To Dance To. Check it out on March 23 if you can. After this it's on to the 10th anniversary Emerg in 2002, which sounds like a good opportunity to present a survey of local dance from the last nine years. If you've got an idea about that, get in touch.

PND presents a mainstage series of companies and independent choreographers drawn from across Canada; commissions new work in concert with other Canadian presenters; and supports the local dance community by presenting workshops with visiting artists and producing Emergency. PND is a member of Candance, Canada's national network of dance presenters, and Dance Ontario, and is affiliated with the Peterborough Arts Umbrella, a charitable agency serving area artists and arts groups. PAU issues receipts for tax deductible donations made to PND. Peterborough New Dance receives valuable operating support from the Canada Council for the Arts and Ontario Arts Council.
